A note about salaries of Primary School teachers

We are asked several times every term to assist small schools to find teachers for their schools at salaries under R15 000 per month (before tax) and with no benefits. My conscience will not allow me to assist, for two reasons

1. R15 000 per month is not a suitable salary for someone living in a city, who has studied for four years, has SACE registration, police clearance, and is being asked to work a ten-hour day (once the extra-murals, prep and marking are done) plus some Saturdays in most cases! If parents want independent education they need to be educated about the costs, unfortunately, in South Africa, that is part of the school's job.

2. If I send a qualified candidate who is qualified and prepared to work for a salary under R15kpm, the chances are excellent that they won't stay long! The minute another school offers them a better salary they will be gone – and the school will blame Placements in Education for sending them an unreliable teacher!

So yes, we have had requests for teachers that are not in this Bulletin. Now you know why.

Best regards

Alison
